Altimetric profile

Min elevation 1090 m Max elevation 2328 m

At La Chapelle en Valgaudemar, take the local road (D480), continue past the post office and then near the National Park Centre. After the campsite, the road crosses the Séveraisse river.

1. Stay on the road and cross a mountain stream.
2. Immediately on the left, a path leads upwards following the banks of this stream. Take this path and start the ascent with some winding sections among the scree and go on to cross a heather moor. The view gradually opens up onto the Navette valley and the hamlet of Les Portes which lies opposite.
3. Cross a stream and then, a few dozen metres further on, at an intersection take the upward-winding path on the right. You reach the montane zone among alpine grasslands, offering a view over the village of La Chapelle and the Refuge de l'Olan. Nearby, an old concrete slab testifies to the passage of an avalanche in the 1950s.

Jas crossing of the Bourelle (D)

Just above the signpost, there are the ruins of a pasture shelter commonly called the, « jas ». Often built using dry stones, this kind of shelter was used to protect the flocks during the summer season.

Olan Refuge (E)

Situated at an altitude of 2350 m, this large building constructed in 1957 was carried away by an avalanche two years later. A witness to this is a concrete slab below the refuge. Rebuilt in 1966, it was definitively extended in 1978 with a capacity of 54 places. A stage of the Tour de l'Oisans (GR 54), it welcomes hikers in the summer season and provides a shelter in the winter; it belongs to the Club Alpin Français.
